sentence, where "meaning" is understood to be a non-linguistic entity which is shared by all sentences with the same meaning.

Equivalently, a proposition is the non-linguistic bearer of truth or falsity which makes any sentence that expresses it either true or false. While the term "proposition" may sometimes be used in everyday language to refer to a linguistic statement which can be either true or false, the technical philosophical t Proposition -

Wikipedia The term 'proposition' has a broad use in contemporary philosophy. It is used to refer to some or all of the following: the primary bearers of truth-value, the objects of belief and other "propositional attitudes" (i.e., what is believed, doubted, etc. [1]), the term is treated either extensionally as a class of objects or intensionally as a set of properties. Propositional Function (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy) According to this theory, the basic bearers of representational properties are particular mental or spoken actions. Propositions are types of these actions, which we use to classify and individuate our attitudes and speech acts. This theory abandons several key features of the traditional Fregean conception of propositional content, including the idea that propositions are the primary bearers of truth conditions, the distinction between content and force, and the concept of entertainment.
