Linguistic Typology And First Language Linguistic typology is a field of linguistics that studies and classifies languages according to their structural and functional features. Its aim is to describe and explain the common properties and the structural diversity of the world's languages. Its subdisciplines include, but are not limited to: qualitative typology, which deals with the issue of comparing languages and within-language variance; quantitative typology, which deals with the distribution of structural patterns in the ... Linguistic typology - Wikipedia Some additional intersections between semantic typology and first-language-acquisition research are explained, concentrating on issues of information packaging and lexicalization. The article then investigates two basic questions about first-language acquisition that intersect centrally with the concerns of linguistic typologists. Linguistic Typology and First Language Acquisition ... "Linguistic typology took off in its modern form with the ground-breaking research of Joseph Greenberg, such as, for example, his seminal paper on a cross-linguistic survey of word order leading to a series of implicational universals (Greenberg 1963). . . . Greenberg also attempted to establish methods for quantifying typological studies, in ... Linguistic Typology - ThoughtCo LINGUISTIC TYPOLOGY AND FIRST LANGUAGE ACQUISITION MELISSA BOWERMAN 1.
