Uncontested Dissolution Of Marriage With The divorce process in an uncontested divorce is a bit different from a contested divorce. In an uncontested divorce, you will need to first fill out a divorce settlement agreement. This settlement agreement should outline the specifics of the agreement you made with your spouse. You will then take the agreement to the judge. Do I Have to Go to Court for an Uncontested Divorce? - FindLaw In the event that you and your spouse agree to terminate your marital relationship, and are able to reach agreements on all relevant issues, you may be able to proceed with either a dissolution or an uncontested divorce. This means that you and your spouse would need to reach agreements about parenting your children, support payments, property division, debt repayment, spousal support and any other issues that are of importance to the two of you. Dissolution and Uncontested Divorce - Farlow & Associates An Uncontested Dissolution of Marriage (or more commonly referred to as a divorce) is where both spouses agree on all issues concerning the divorce, including but not limited to the division of marital property and debts, child custody, child support, and spousal support ("alimony"). Uncontested Dissolution of Marriage/Civil Union An uncontested divorce means spouses have agreed on terms of property division and child custody issues. They don't need a judge to intervene in any disputes and have signed an official marital settlement agreement. What to Expect in a Final Hearing for Uncontested Divorce ... This situation is called "uncontested" because: Your spouse or domestic partner filed a response to your summons and petition; AND ; The 2 of you have a written agreement about your divorce or separation, dividing your property and debt, child custody and visitation, and support issues. Uncontested Case - divorce_or_separation_selfhelp When a married couple decides to file for divorce, it can be a difficult and emotionally draining decision. However, in Pennsylvania, the legal process of divorce does not have to be nearly as difficult. Fortunately, there is a process available for a "mutual consent divorce" when both spouses are willing to consent to the divorce and agree on all of their divorce-related issues. Uncontested Divorce in Pennsylvania | DivorceNet If you do not respond to your spouse or partner's petition for divorce or separation or you file a response but reach an agreement, your case will be considered either a "default" or an "uncontested case." In a "true default" case, you are giving up your right to have any say in your divorce or legal separation case.
